Beirut Appoints Rashid Solh to Try for Regime

BEIRUT, Oct. 24 (UPD .-- President Suleiman Franjieh today asked career politician Rashid Solh to form a new Lebanese cabinet to replace the outgoing government of a cousin, Takleddin Solh, a spokesman for the presidential palace said.

Rashid Solh is the second premier-designate appointed by Mr. Franjieh in 22 days. The government of Takieddin Solh fell last month after criticism of its alleged failure to combat inflation and public violence.

Mr. Frantich appointed Saeb Salam on Oct, 3 to form a new administration, but Mr. Salam gave up the attempt Monday because of strong opposition from leftist political groups.

Rashid Solh, a former judge, now practices law. He belongs to the National Awakening Front, a group of prominent Sumi Mos-lems—the sect from which the sect from which Lebanese premiers are selected under the national covenant governing the sharing of political power.

The Solh family has been in Lebanese politics for years. Rashid is a cousin of the late Riad Solh. one of the nation's founding fathers, and of the late Sami Solh, who was premier in 1958 when, during civil strife, 10,000 U.S. troops were sent to Lebanon.

Giscard Urges an Oil Summit

Exporters-Users Economic Parley By James Goldsborough

But he-said that France would not prevent its European Economic Community partners from joining

Cooperation Is Important

"We don't blama our partners for joining this or that organ-ization," he said, "but in this question of oil, cooperation Lwith oil producers] is important." He sald that he already had received support for the world meeting he proposing.

The 12 nations setting up the oil-sharing plan have hesitated to join in such a producer-con-sumer meeting before they have worked out their own program within their agency. Saudi-Arabia, among the oil producers, has been the principal spokesman for the worldwide meeting.

Mr. Giscard d'Estaing said that he hoped the nine EEC countries would be represented as a single bloc at the meeting, but he admitted that so far there was no common EEC position on energy. He said that the key to the success of the meeting would be to guarantee the revenues of the oil exporters through tying oil prices into a wider price index while the world economy is in its present adjustment

Despite his refusal to join the oil-shaing agency, Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's nearly two-hour performance was marked by words seldom heard in French presidential press conferences m recent times. He spoke of "interdependence," "transfers of sovereignty," "cooperation," "n tiation" and "world policy."

Kissinger Sees 'GoodBeginning' Made in Moscow

By Christopher S. Wren

MOSCOW, Oct. 24 (NYT).—Secretary of State Henry Kirsinger today made what he termed "a very good beginning" in wide-ranging talks at the Kremlin with party leader Leonid Breahney and Foreign Minister Andrel Gromyko.

The day's discussions, which took six and a half hours, were dominated by the Middle East and the European security talks no in their second stage in Geneva, but also encompassed Sovict-U.S. relations, including the matter of trade. The issue of strategic arms imitations, which was expected to figure prominently in Mr. Kissinger's visit, came up only later tonight but will be taken up again Peak Period

Few substantive details were available from either side, al-though an American spokesman tonight characterized the discus-sions as taking place in "a very cordial atmosphere." During a luncheon, Mr. Kissinger and Mr. Gromyko both described the morning's exchanges as "frank." indicating that the two sides had plunged almost immediately into the differences separating them on the various issues.

Bhotto Arrives Meanwhile, Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto of Pakistan arrived in Moscow today for an official visit and began talks with Premier Alexei Kosygin, who greeted him at the airport.

Tonight at an official dinner for Mr. Bhutto, Mr. Kosygin said: There exist objective conditions for development of Soviet-Paki-stani relations and, as we see, the mutual wish to elevate our bilateral relations to a higher plane."

The Soviet Premiee praised Pakistan for having worked foe a peace settlement with India and Bangladesh and voiced hope for the "speediest" resolution of Pakistan's border dispute with "our friendly neighbor Afghanis-

Mr. Kissinger is expected to see Mr. Bhutto when he stops in Islamabad next week in the to cover more than a dozen

No public indication was given today of agreement on a possible summit meeting late next month between Mr. Brezhney and President Ford, although the subject was expected to have come up in the course of discussing mutual relations. Such a meeting, which has been pushed privately by the Russians, is now considered increasingly likely. It might be held in the Soviet Far East when Mr. Brezhnev goes to Mongolia for an official visit and Mr. Ford has finished a visit to Japan. In the course of a toast at lunch today, Mr. Gromyko stressed Moscow'a interest in continuing the policy of accommodation with Washington established under former President Richard Nixon.

The Soviet foreign minister said that it was 'too early to speak or even hint at the possibla outcome" of today's meeting with Mr. Kissinger, but he said that Mr. Brezhnev had found it "a very useful one."

Mr. Kissinger, who arrived here last night, said in reply that "The U.S. and Soviet Union have a very special responsibility for preserving the peace in the world and for contributing to the positive aspirations of mankind."

U.K. Government Intervenes in

Truckers' Strike GLASGOW, Oct. 24 (AP).-The

Labor government intervened to-day in a wildcat strike of 6,000 truck drivers that bas thrown thousands of people out of work in Scotland and threatens to spread to the rest of Britain.

The government directed union leaders and employers to report tomorrow to the Department of Employment's conciliation office. Both sides agreed. But whether the move will halt the wildcat walkout was doubtful. The drivers rejected yesterday a pay increase negotiated by their union, tha Transport and General Workers.

The two-week-old strike has touched off a wave of labor mili-tancy in Scotland involving walkouts by Glasgov sewage-disposal men and garbaga collectors, bus drivers and suhway workers. Huge piles of uncollected garbage have risen at street corners and the millions of gallons of untreated sewage that are pouring into the Clyde River hava reduc-ed the oxygen level of the water by 75 per cent, public-health authorities said.

James Jack, general secretary of the Scottish Trades Union Congress, warned the strikers that their action was endangering Prime Minister Harold Wilson's government and undermining its efforts to curb inflation.

Of Diplomacy For Brezhnev

Extensive Schedule After Kissinger Visit

By Peter Osnos

MOSCOW, Oct. 24 WP.-Soviet party leader Leonid Brezh-nev has embarked ou a period of unusually heavy diplomatic activity marked by talks here and abroad with a host of government heads and key foreign ministers, U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissingee, who arrived yesterday iu Moscow, was followed today, hy Pakistan's Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto. German Chancelloe Helmut Schmidt arrives Monday for his first summit session with Mr. Browner, In Novembee, Mr. Brezhnev goes to Mongolia. On the way hack, he hopes to meet somewhere in eastern Siberia with President Ford. In December, he flies to Paris and in January goes to Cairo. (Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy was here last week to arrange that visit.1 British Prime Minister Harold Wilson has said he would like to come to Moscow, hus nothing has as yet been announced.

Indeed, the schedule for the next few months is so busy that many other visits are unlikely simply because it would be hard to find enough time. Natural Consequence One way to explain the activity is as a natural consequence of world events: new leaders in France, West Germany and the United States, and the need to patch up relations with Egypt's Anwae Sadat, for example. But some diplomatic observers here see special significance in the personal role being played by Mr. Brezimev. As recently as 1972, a similarly husy fall-winter travel schedule was divided between Mr. Brezhnev, Premicr Alexei Kosygin and Presideut Nikolai Podgorny. Since then, Mr. Brezhnev has emerged even more clearly as the principal Soviet figure in the world arena. In fact, a visit by anyone except Mr. Brezhnev can be interpreted, in some cases, as a sign of Kremlin coolness. That is how Mr. Kosygin's August trip to Romania, Moscow's recalcitrant ally, was viewed by some dipiomats here.

Another possible reason for the extensive schedule is that the Smrlet leadership has been reviewing its policies in critical world areas recently and may now be setting in motion some of the decisions taken as a result of that study.

The outcome of the Kissinger talks and, if held, the Ford oteeting, and the consultations with German and French leaders will primide important clues to how the Russians now intend to pursue détente with the West. Moreover, Mr. Kissinger's efforts to bring about another round of Middle East negotiations could be at a decisive point by January when Mr. Brezhney will be in Egypt. Therefore, the timing of the Cairo trip, Western diplomats have suggested, may not have been arhitrary.

Mr. Bhutto's trip here is his first since March, 1972, That session successfully re-established Pakistani-Soviet relations, which had suffered as a result of Kremlin support of India in the Bangladesh war An article yesterday in Prayda, the Communist party newspaper, gave a favorable picture of Mr. Bhutto's efforts to "weaken the political positions of the reactionary conservative forces of Paristani society."

Public Suspicion of A-Power Hurts Japan's Energy Plans

By Don Oberdorfer

TOKYO, Oct. 24 (WP).-The Japanese public's continuing qualms about all things nuclear have raised serious doubts about this country's ambitious plans for future reliance on atomic power

Industrialists and government officials consider the recent saga of Japan's pioneer atomic-powered ship, the Mutsu, to have beeo a catastrophe for the couse of nuclear development. After being blocked in its home port by protesting fishermen, the ship sneaked out to sea in a storm and promptly developed a fault in its nuclear reactor. The reactor was shut down, to prevent a radiation leak, and the Mutsu drifted for 50 days before the government was able to negotiate deal with fishermen to permit the crippled vessel to return

Heavy news coverage highlighted the determination of the fishermen, the safety problems of atomic power and the defensiveness of the government. The government is now seeking a permanent new home port for the ship, but so far no community is interested.

Another manifestation of public attitudes is the current political furor over the reported presence of atomic arms aboard U.S. warships in Japanese ports. An official admission that atomic weapons long have been coming here "in transit," as is widely helieved, might bring down the government of Premier Kakuei Tanaka.

Power Chief's Views

"We have many difficult problems," said Tamaki Ipponmatsu. chairman of the Japan Atomic Power Co. If the country is to fulfill its nuclear-power targets of the next decade, goals which Mr. Ipponmatsu personally believes may be too ambitious, the people must obtain "a gradual understanding of the real situation" regarding ouclear matters, he said in an interview.

The government's long-range energy plan, promulgated several years ago, calls for emphasis on nuclear-power development. Under this plan, such power would stendily rise from less than 1 per cent of Japan'e total energy supply today to some 60,000 mega-watts, or 10 per cent, in 1985.

Since the Middle East petroleum crisis a year ago, government and business leaders have called for even greater emphasis on nuclear energy as a substitute for imported oil. Some authorities suggested that the 1985 target should be raised to 70,000 megawatts.

According to Mr. Ipponmatsu, the atomic-power program is behind schedule, because of the difficulty of finding plant sites acceptable to the public. The government has recently passed three laws authorizing subsidies for communities accepting power This may be counterplants. balanced, however, by the recent bad publicity.

Lower Estimate "A target of 60,000 to 70,000 megewatts [by 1935] will be very hard to meet. My estimate is below half of that," said Toshihiro Tajima, managing director of the Industrial Bank of Jepan and a member of e nuclear-energy advisory committee.

Chairman Ipponmatsu is not as pessimistic as the banker, but not as optimistic as the official forecast. "I hope we can fulfill the 60,000-megawett target, but actually it may be difficult. In my personal opinion, 40,000 megawatts might be more realistic."

he said. Even a reduced growth rate on such a scele would require e big investment in nuclear plants, natural uranium supplies, uranimum-enrichment plants and waste-processing facilities. But public attitudes may be even a more difficult hurdle than the formidable financial resources and technology required. Growing consciousness of environmental problems of all kinds have made siting problems difficult. In Japan, eveo small amounts of public opposition are sufficient to deny the "consensus" required for action. Today, five nuclear power stations are in struction and some 61 are reported to be in planning stages So the greatest siting problems fertilizer scandal Mr. Nha, who was also in charge of the department dealing with Communist defectors, has been at Mr. Thieu's side since 1960. Beginning as the President's press spokesman and personal secretary, he was appointed in 1973 to the cabinet-level post of commissioner general for information. Last February he was elevated to the cabinet.

Assailed Peace Talks

During the difficult negotiations over the Paris peace agreements in late 1972. Mr. Nhs led the ettack against the concessions to the Communists proposed by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. "We have fought this war for 15 years to accept this?" Mr. Nha reportedly said to Mr. Kissinger during one of the sessions in the palace.

Mr. Nha's departure was clearly a victory for the opposition, Before yesterday's demands by the newspaper publishers, the Rev. Tran Huu Thanh, a conservative Catholic priest who is leading a campaign against official corruption, had repeatedly mentioned Mr. Nha as one man who would have to go.

"That young man is detested by everyone," Father Thanh said

It was not clear today whether the resignation would temporarily deflate the opposition or merely whet its appetite for bigger tar-gets. Father Thanh and others have made little secret of their desire to see Mr. Thieu himself resign from office.

An informed Western diplomat noted late today that "the opposition is in high gear for the first time in many years, and it will probably take more than these two resignations to stop its mo-

Synod Receives 2 Draft Texts; Vote Due Today

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 24 (UPI).—The Catholic Synod of Bishops tonight received draft texts of two closing statements it has decided to issue when the monthlong gathering ends on Seturday. The synod will vote on the statements tomorrow.

One statement, a spokesman said, will be "something stronger than a message" addressed to the entire Roman Catholic Church on the synod's theme, evangelization in the modern

The other statement will be a "definition of the main orienta-tions which emerged from the synod discussions," the synod The two statements emerged as the alternative to an abortive ettempt to issue some concise and clear-cut pastoral proposals at the end of the synod, Earlier, the bishops rejected three-quarters of a 40-page draft of proposals as being too general. They agreed that time was too short to assemble another set of proposals.

Three Teen-Agers Hurt in Bombing Of Belfast Shop

BELFAST, Oct. 24 (UPI).-A bomb today blew out the front of a furniture store on the busy Shankill Road in a Protestant section of West Belfast, injuring three teen-age girls, police said, The explosive device was pushed through a mail slot in the shop's door and the explosion sent rubble and glass splinters into the street. The three girls were hospitalized, suffering from cuts and shock.

Meanwhile, the Protestant Ulster Volunteer Force told a news conference here today that it would maintain the ceasefire it has observed since last November.

But the spokesman said the UVF leaders were divided on whether to continue the truce or not. He said the UVF brigade staff in a Belfast meeting earlier this week voted, 38-34, to contimue the truce.

HINGTON, Oct. 24 (AP). of Dean was prompted by the roughest cross-examination the former White House counsel has been subjected to so far. Character and Honesty

William Prates, the principal lawyer for defendant John Ehrlichman, focused on a series of incidents in Dean's White House career reflecting directly on his character and honesty.

Repeatedly Dean readily admitted to destroying evidence needed for the original Watergate trial and to coaching witnesses who later committed perjury begrand juries investigating Watergate and the break-in at the office of Daniel Elisberg's psychiatrist.

At one point, Mr. Frates said, "There is finger-pointing in this courtroom and there'll probably be more of it,

"His [Desn's] credibility is one of the main issues here."

Later, Mr. Frates sought to portray Dean as playing an active role in conceiving the intelligence plan which resulted in the June, 1972, break-in at Democratic National Committee headquarters.

Before Watergate prosecutors objected, Mr. Frates repeatedly asked Dean if there were not four meetings, instead of two, at which the so-called "Liddy plan" was discussed with Dean present. Dean acknowledged that the meetings occurred, but contended that he did not play an active role in any of the discussions.

Judge Gives His Views

At that, Judge Strice lectured the courtroom on his own views of the origins of Watergate. "I suppose a judge shouldn't say anything, because every time I say something people put the wrong interpretation on it," Judge Siries said, "Mayhe I shouldn't say what is on my mind."

But then Judge Sirica reversed himself, saying, "I'll tell you what is on my mind. It's too bad that Mr. Mitchell didn't say, Throw them out of here, get them out fast. And you wouldn't be in this courtroom today."

Judge Strica referred to a meeting in the office of defendant and former Attorney General John Mitchell in which convicted Watergate conspirator Gordon Liddy proposed the intelligence plan which ended up as the Watergate burglary. While Judge Sirica's comment about the Liddy plan was made with the jury out of the courtroom, his reference to Dean was made in their hearing:

Stans Is Said To Seek Deal On Pleading

By Richard Cohen

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (WP). Former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans, once former President Richard Nixon's premier political fund-raiser, has offered to plead guilty to minor charges relating to his 1972 campaign activities in exchange for having more serious charges dropped, informed sources said yesterday.

Mr. Stans's lawyer was reported to have proposed the deal to outgoing special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski more than two weeks ago, but the sources said they did not know what Mr. Jaworski's response was.

They said that Mr. Jaworski told associates that Mr. Stans's plea-bargaining would require "a tough decision," possibly the toughest he had to make before leaving office later this week,

The proposed deal, according to the sources, included an offer to plead guilty on as many as six technical misdemeanors in exchange for having more serious felcny charges dropped.

Amnesty Chief Hopeful Despite Slow Start

Upsurge Expected in U.S. Program

By Sara Hansard

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (IHT). -Only about one in every 11 Vietnam war deserters and draft evaders eligible for President Ford's conditional amnesty pro-gram has applied for it.

The program, which Mr. Ford announced on Sept. 16, has been criticized both by conservative groups opposed to any form of amnesty and by anti-war groups wanting unconditional amnesty. Justice Department figures, through Monday, show that a mere 1 per cent, or 66 men, of the estimated 6,600 draft evaders who could apply, have signed up for the alternative work program. Selective Service rigures through Tuesday show that 1,419 men, about 14 per cent of the approximately 10,000 deserters eligible, have entered the clemency pro

Officials express no disappointment at the program's slow ac-ceptance, saying it is a "very difficult" step for the deserters and draft evaders to take.

The Deadline

Under the program, the first major amnesty grant since World War II, the final date for signing up for alternative service is Jan. 31, 1975. The Selective Service is responsible for finding jobs for the men doing alternative service. which can last up to 24 months.

The least amount of time pre-scribed has been 12 months. A elemency board headed by former Sen Charles Goodell, R-N.Y. a critic of the Vietnam war, has been established to decide the length of service for men who have been convicted or dishonorably discharged. Eightythree men have been furloughed from prison since Sept. 16 while the clemency board was being Selective Service Director Byron Pepitone said that most of the men "are a little distrustful" when they turn themselves in. "but they're surprised at the way they're treated." He said he expected a big increase in the number of men in the program around the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays. The 3,900 inquiries about the program received so far amounts to "pretty fair progress," Mr.

Pepitone said. Although President Ford's program was generally well accepted in Congress, many veteran groups and war opponents criti-

Most government spokesmen questioned said they thought the poor early response to the program was due to such factors as a lack of knowledge of the program, many men being comfortably settled in other countries and having no wish to return to the United States, and the fact that many men were still 'feeling It out." LOS ANGELES, Oct. 24-The family of missing newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst has enlisted the help of retired underworld figure Mickey Cohen in a desperate effort to locate their daughter.

Publisher Randolph Hearst and his wife. Catherine, accompanied by their attorney. James Mac-Innis, recently had a dinner meeting here with the 61-year-old gangster. The meeting at Gatsby's, an exclusive restaurant, lasted more than two hours.

"We talked about a lot of things, but I guess finding that young lady was the main topic of conversation," Cohen said.

"I offered to help in any way I could and I've already laid out some of my own money-not much, $250 here, $300 there-for some meetings and a couple of plane tickets" he said

A few days after Miss Hearst was kidnapped from her Berckely, Calif. apartment last Feb. 4 Cohen reportedly called the Hearst family home in Hills-borough, couth of San Francisco, and offered his assistance.

The 180 reporters and editors of the Dong-A Ilbo, which has a national circulation of about 600,000, unanimously voted to sit in and to refuse to put out a paper until their demands for freedom of the press are printed on the front page.

The reporters of Hankuk Ilbo. a major morning paper, today also voted to suspend publishing until they can print certain stories. Newsmen at others of the seven major dailies in South Korea reportedly are considering similar measures What sparked the sudden outburst from the press was the pickup and interrogation editors and a publisher from the Dong-A Ilbo and Hankuk Ilbo in the last three days by the Central Intelligence The newspapers apparently violated a government directive last week banning stories on four subjects.

One of the subjects is the demonstrations and problems surrounding South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu.

Top GOP in Figures Given House, Senate

By David E. Rosenbaum

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (NYT). -In a reversal of traditional practice, Democratic congressional candidates are raising more money this year than are Republicans.

A study released Tuesday by Common Cause shows that Democrats in contested races for election in November had raised $22 million by the end of August, while Republicans had raised only $16 million.

A preliminary analysis of more ecent reports of receipts by some candidates shows that the trend is continuing.

In 1972 Republicans received 54 per cent and Democrats 46 per cent of the $70 million collected by congressional candidates, the other hand, these fund-raisers said, many highly qualified Republicans decided not to run this year after the Watergate disclosures dimmed their prospects of being elected. As a result, there is a shortage of outstanding Republicans chalenging Democratic incumbents

The Common Cause analysts reported that Democrats, through the end of August, had received $3.9 million of the $5.5 million contributed by special-interest groups. About two-thirds of the special-interest money that went to Democrats came from labor organizations, while most of the rest came from business and professional organizations.

In what Mr. Wertheimer called a "remarkable" development, those individuals who donated a candidates gave five times as much to Democrats as they gave to Republicans.

He is said to have played in 140 cities in 30 countries. While his repertoire was large, he retained a particular fondness for the great concertos of the 19th century, by Beethoven, Mendels sohn, Brahms and Tchaikovski, adding to them the famous concertos of his fellow Soviet musicians and friends, Prokofiev and Dimitri Shostakovich.

His concerts and many recordings were often in the company of such notable conductors as Georgi Szell, Otto Klemperer, Leonard Bernstein and Eugene Ormandy.

The Soviet Union rewarded him with its highest honors, including the title of People's Artist.

Mr. Oistrakh was not the only member of his family to win fame as a violinist. His son, Igor, reached a high level of achievement that made popular the nicknames King David and Prince Igor. Asked about five years ago it he had any plans to abdicate in favor of his sol, the older artist answered, 'My son, Igor, is a fine violinist. BRUSSELS, Oct. 74 (UPD.-The European Economic Community's Executive Commission has told its member nations that they may join transatiantic oil cooperation with the United States without breaking Common Mar-ket rules, Commission sources said today.

The Commission's roling gave the green light to eight of the nine Common Market usilons to ratify a major agreement on emergency oil-sharing with the United States, Japan, Canada and Norway. It also cut the ground from under the minth nation, Frame, which today announced it would not join the program. Among other reasons for refusing to join, France claimed that the program is incompatible with the Common Market's own fledgling energy program.

Positive Reply

Belgium had asked the Commission, which oversees the Common Market bureaucracy, to rule on this issue. Sources within the Commission and the Belgian-government said that the Commission sent a positive reply to Belgium today, saying that there was no incompatibility.

The deadline for ratification is next Tuesday. If most of the 12 nations approve the agreement, a new international energy agency is scheduled to be set up within the Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development (OEOD) to oversee the agreement.

The agreement was worked out in eight months by the 12-nation Energy Coordination Group, which was set up at the Washington oil conference last February.

Sharing and Conservation

The agreement sets detailed rules for oil-sharing and conservation in times of emergency and arranges cooperation in research and other areas. It goes far beyond the Common Market's own program, which only lists vague aims to be implemented later.

Nevertheless, Common Market Energy Commissioner Henri Simonet, a Beigian, had urged the community nations to accept the The Commission agreement. sources said the entire 13-man group accepted Mr. Simonet's pro-The Commission also warned

How Not to Do It

President Ford's current hassle with the Democrats over his charge that heavy Democratic gains in next month's elections would threaten bipartisanship in foreign policies and that then "peace could be in jeopardy" is an excellent example of how not to inject world affairs into domestic politics.

The President does have a point. Overwhelming congressional strength of one party while the other is in the White House could complicate the creation and implementation of truly national policies, especially when the whole question of the relationship between the executive and the legislative branches is being debated Moreover, the ability of Congress to make its own contribution to the formation of foreign policy. rather than act as a check and a support to presidential concepts, is disputable, after so many years in which Congress has largely accepted the latter role

But these are fairly subtle theses which are difficult to discuss in the general terms used by Mr. Ford, and perhaps even harder to pinpoint successfully with reference to the President's specific disagreements with Congress. After all, much of what President Ford has reason to complain of—such as the congressional insertion of the immigration issue into the evolution of a trade policy with the Soviet Union and the hard line Congress has taken on Turkey-do have popular support in areas of the electorate.

But the most pragmatic argument against Mr. Ford's tactics is that history has usually Hill.

shown them to be counterproductive. The Democrats are charging that the President is repeating the techniques of Nixon and Agnew in the 1970 campaign; a closer analogy is President Wilson's appeal to the voters in 1918 to give him a Democratic Congress. The result was that, while the war still continued (although election day was very close to Armistice Day), the country gave Mr. Wilson his first Republican Congress. And one might easily see in that the omens of the eventual rejection by the Senate of the Versailles Treaty, including the League of Nations, and many of the unhappy events that followed.

Mr. Ford is said to be alarmed at the signs of Republican apathy which he notes in his tours around the country. For that, Watergate and the pardon of Richard Nixon must take no small portion of blame. But there is also the fact that Mr. Ford's own leadership on the major issue of inflation has been less than inspired or inspiring. The country might be content to relax with President Ford after the tensions of the past two years -but relaxation is hardly what is called for at this stage of the stagflationary crunch. And while the President and Secretary of State Kissinger have shown initiative with respect to the global aspects of this problem, tt has had little effect on the grocer's bill at home. That is what concerns the voter, not some dispute over just how many Democrats Mr. Ford feels he can cope with on Capitol

Greece: A Bell Tolls

Col. George Papadopoulos, who imprisoned and exiled thousands of his fellow citizens during more than six years as head of Greece's military dictatorship, has now experienced for himself the predawn knock on the door and the peremptory banishment to an Aegean island. Among those keeping him company on Kea, off Greece's south coast, are the other members of the triumvirate that overthrew the constitutional government in 1967.

Missing from their company but also charged with conspiring to regain power by overthrowing the provisional civilian government of Premier Constantine Caramanlis is Gen. Demitrice Icannides, the shadowy Figure who displaced Papadopoulos as the regime'e strong man after the bloody suppression of a 1973 student demonstration. He has evaded arrest so far by going into

Even prior to the banishment order, Col. Papadopoulos and Gen, Ioannides had been charged by the public prosecutor, along with two dozen others, with "moral responsibility for premeditated multiple murder" in connection with the brutal crackdown at the Athens Polytechnic last November. The junta had admitted only 18 deaths in this episode, but officials now say the number killed probably exceeded 50, with more than 1,100 in-

These actions ought to satisfy Greeks that the men who clamped seven years of tyranny on their country will not evade justice. With the reinstatement of senior judges, ousted illegally by the junta in 1968, Greece's judicial system is functioning normally again, free of interference from the provisional government. The public prosecutor lost no time in filing charges after a month's investigation of the Polytechnic tragedy.

Premier Caramanlis has preferred to proceed slowly, first isolating and then suspending junta leaders but leaving more drastic action for the courts and the democratic government to be elected next month. The impatience of those who suffered under the junta is understandable; but establishing individual guilt should be left to the courts, operating under traditional standards of due THE NEW YORK TIMES.

veekend prophesies mass starvation and a world food crisis more severe than the current energy crists if present trends in population and food production are not changed, Over the same weekend the administration announced plans for grain sales to the Soviet Union, somewhat scaled down from the ones recently canceled at President Ford's urging, but still very substantial.

The interaction of the two developments underscores that American food production is no longer simply a complex domestic economic issue—even though that reality has not yet struck the Wisconsin farmers who slaughtered their calves last week in protest against low livestock prices. Grain exports are a major element in international politics and a significant prop for détente. Those same exports also earn a significant portion of the foreign exchange which pays America's inflated oil bill. Finally, America's capacity to produce far more food than its citizens can consume, even in the most wasteful way, makes this country the hope of the world'e hungry and gives it the leverage to lead in developing global food policies which bear some rational relationship to humankind's common plight on a shared and shrinking planet.

Even in the Department of Agriculture, where catastrophic propheciee about the food-population ratio are played down, there is evidence of some deep concern. In an unreleased report, the department's Economic Research Service sees the problem as one of distribution. Assuming a continuance of current trends, the report projects that by 1985 there will be a surplus of 51.9 million tone of food in the developed countries and a deficit of 47.6 million tons in the develop-

Whether the issue is one of production or distribution, or both, food is an overriding political, economic and humanitarian concern for the world's people; the United States has yet to face up to that fact. Agriculture Becretary Butz, who will lead the U.S. delegation to the world food conference in Rome, has scressed that he does not want

A House subcommittee report released last this country to "overcommit itself" there. While Mr. Butz's strong advocacy of Adam Smith policies for an unrestricted free market in food encourages international speculators to engage in secret dealings that make them fortunes, other administration spokesmen-including the President-decry the lack of responsibility of the oil-producing countries in abusing their control over a vital energy source. Those exhortations ring hollow from a country which has 6 per cent of the world's population and consumes 40 per cent of the world's resources, but which consistently declines to develop a responsible food policy or even to face the problem forthrightly.

> Stopping a huge and disruptive grain sale at the last moment, slapping on patchwork controls, then opening the spigot a bit for the Soviet Union to facilitate Secretary of State Kissinger's talks in Moscow do not add up to a policy. Whatever the merit of the individual decisions, they are mere improvisations in the face of a hurricane. There are legitimate issues to be debated. among them: What is the appropriate balance between America's obligations to its own producers and consumers and to the rest of the world? Is the problem principally one of production or of distribution? How best can production and distribution systems be stimulated in poor countries? What level of worldwide grain reserves is desirable? Is a major effort to change consumption habits in the developed countries possible? How best to persuade the oil producers to help in the fight against hunger?

> But to admit that there are choices among policies is not to argue that there should be no policies. So far, the United States seems to have developed no major food policy other than to keep a low profile in Rome and to cling to the free market system. While he is out on the political hustings, President Ford is permitting Secretary Butz to lead the administration toward a major diplomatic flasco in a field in which the United States is pre-eminently equipped to propose sound policies for an ever more interdependent THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Politics and the World's Hungry Nations

By Anthony Lewis

NEW YORK.-On the current trends of population and food production, according to international experts, by 1985 the poor countries of the world would need 85 million tons of grain a year from outside. In a year of bad harvests, the need could be 100 million tons, or even more.

Like other statistics, that projection has an abstract ring to it. But it is literally a matter of life and death, and it presents a formidable challenge to human organization

We couldn't even move 100 million tons of grain today," an American official remarks—"not across the world in any limited time. Remember how our ports and railroads were fouled up when the Russians bought 15 million tons from us."

The Price

Before the problem of moving that much food, there are the questions of how to grow it and to pay for it. At today's prices, 100 million tons of cereals would cost something approaching $20 billion, Haiti and Bangladesh and the 31 other food-short countries will not have the foreign exchange to pay for it.

That is the scale of the issues facing the World Food Conference in Rome starting Nov. 5. Public discussion of the food problem understandably tends to focus on immediate matters, such as the amount of American aid to hold off imminent mass starystion in South Asia. But the conference is meant to take a longer view, and that means dealing with the most fundamental issues of population, resources and the wealth of nations.

The Rome conference is to have 130 countries participating. No such meeting can be expected to come up with concrete solutions for the world's food needs. Nevertheless, State Department officials preparing for the conference seem modestly hopeful of agreed progress in defining the problems. They sketch these points:

1. Estimates of food shortages differ in detail, but there is now general agreement that the less developed countries face a very large and continuing deficit.

2. The old concern about overproduction and surpluses in the West is disappearing. A symbolic indication of the change occurred the other day. After years of badgering the Common Market to keep its doors open for larger purchases of American grain, the United States successfully urged the market to buy less this year.

3. There must be intensified international efforts to increase food production in the less developed countries, for example by scientific improvements tropical agriculture. But for the foreseeable future there will be dependence on imports from a handful of surplus countries, primarily the United States, Canada, Australia, Argentina and the Common Market. 4. In the past the United States has carried about 85 per cent of the world's grain reserves. Just about everyone agrees that that is no longer possible, either physically or politically. The reserve responsibility must agreement between the State and Agriculture Departments on the question of reserves, with Agriculture favoring a market system of reserves held by grain dealers and other private sources rather than public reserves. But State Department officials say that question is far down the road and much less important than others.

The first necessity, according to the Americans preparing for the Rome conference, is to agree on the volume of reserves needed. Then there is the question of who. should contribute how much to the reserves and where they should be held—in what would amount to an international system of national reserves. The American idea is that

Kissinger is said by his associates to see the food issue now as a crucial example of the new interdependence of nations. mechanisms, hard as it is, only touches the surface of the world food problem. Underneath there is the question of money-the need for the less developed courtries to have enough of it so the United States and others can go all-out in food production for them. Aid can hardly make a dent in that need. In the long run there must be real transfers of purchasing power, and that in turn raises the whole question of the oil producers and their

Menace to Food Seen in Plutonium Finding

By Walter Sullivan NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (NYT) -

Researchers near the plant where pintonium was first produced as atomic-bomb fuel have discovered that, with surprising efficiency. this highly toxic element is picked up from the soil by plant roots. The finding is of concern hecause of the fear that plutonium, in this manner, may make its way into foods. By the end of the century, according to current projections, thousands of tons of this element will be cycling through the world's atomic power industry. Fears have been expressed that the release of even small amounts to the environment would have serious effects.

The researchers said that plutonium "is among the most toxic substances known to man." They suggested that its uptake by roots might have gone so long unobserved because of reluctance to work with such dangerous

Mrs. Marcos Finds Rapport With Mao's Wife

MANILA, Oct. 24 (NYT) .-Imelda Marcos, the First Lady of the Philippines, who was re-ceived more attentively in China last month than most visiting heads of state, attributes her welcome there to Chiang Ching, the wife of Mao Tse-tung.

She acknowledged that some non-Asians might be bemused by apparent incongruitles between her life style-which has never heen called austere-and that of Miss Chiang, who functions as a kind of arbiter of revolutionary rectitude. She is also aware that there has been speculation that Miss Chiang made calculated use of her visit for self-promotion. Miss Chiang, 59, was formerly an actress. She is Mr. Mao's third "Orientals are more total beings," Mrs. Marcos explained. They do not isolate characteristics and motives, but judge the whole person, she said.

Word 'Oriental'

The word "Oriental" kept recurring as Mrs. Marcos talked in an interview last week aboot her visit to China. She spoke nervously at first because, she said, she was afraid she would he misunderstood, then ardently as she warmed to her subject. Mrs. Marcos said she had had many misconceptions about China when she took off for Peking as an envoy of her husband President Ferdinand Marcos, but she had resolved to be "as Oriental as I could, as open-minded as I could." Miss Chiang told Mrs. Marcos at their first meeting, just hefore a state banquet, that she would be able to stay only 10 or 15 minutes because she was "old and sick." But on two succeeding days, she and Mrs. Marcos talked for hours, far more conversation, it appeared, than any other state guest has ever had with Miss Chiang. Among the subjects they discussed were Richard Nixon and the Watergate affair.

Mrs. Marcos recalled that Miss Chiang had said that "Nixon is a brave man."

"She said he started the détente between China and the United States." Mrs. Marcos said, "and that as far as she was concerned, his virtues surely outdid whatever his liabilities were."

'Gone With the Wind'

Miss Chiang dismissed the whole affair, according to Mrs. Marcos, with a remark that Tang Wen-sheng, Mr. Mao's Americanborn interpreter, translated as "Watergate, Watergate! gone with the wind!"

A couple of years ago Miss Chiang had arranged that the movie "Gone With the Wind" be brought to China so she could see ít. Possibly she now discerned

PARIS THEATER. Peter Brook's Latest —An Obstacle Course

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss DARIS Oct. 24 (IHT) -Peter Brook, as assiduous an experimentalist as the modern thester knows, is at it again. Under the auspices of the Festival d'Aucomme, he has taken over an shandoned, out-of-the-way music hall, the Thestre des Bouffes du Word, and in its shabby confines resenting "Timon of Athens" in a French adaptation by Jean-

Claude Carrière.

The battered playhouse, one of the oldest in Paris, is a ghost of its former rococo self. It looks as though it had been used for artilicry practice and then been in an earthquake, Nothing has been done to restore it. The stage has been stripped to expose its skeleson and the winding iron staircases by which the performers enter and exit. The orchestra seats have been ripped out; the players come forward to act before speciators crouching on the floor. The balconies, though neglected, remain intact. In this ruin, in this nostalgic shell, the spirit of theater still lives. Any theater-lover will prefer such surroundings to the sterile, steel-and-chromium halls of current

"Timon" is the most obscure play in the Shakespeare canon. The inconsistency of the action and the unevenness of the style have caused scholars to suspect that Shakespeare was not reaconsible for all of it, Some argue at he merely revised an older play and others that a second author completed an unfinished

Shakespeare work. The mystery remains, but the master poet is indisputably present in the bitter eloquence of the passages in which human ingratitude is berated with passionate despair.

Timon, a wealthy Athenian lavishes his fortune on flattering friends who forsake him when his money is gone and he turns to them for help. He becomes a raging misanthrope, cursing mankind He flees to solitary exile in the forest and there finds more gold. Before he dies he gives the treasure he has unearthed to Alcibiades, a faithful friend banshed by the Athenian senate, who leads an army against the corrupt state to avenge Timon's death and the injuries done to himself.

The Translation

Carrière's French prose translation is serviceable and though to say not Shakespeare, more faithful in form than various versions that have been seen over centuries in England "Timon" is the only Shakespeare play in which women play almost no part. Phrynia and Timandra are introduced briefly for the sole purpose of having the hermit vent his outcries against their sex In 1678, Shadwell "reformed" original by finding places for five actresses and his adaptation was used for a century.

Brook's production is disconcertingly odd and in the evening's second half extremely static, It is costumed in anyhow fashion. Some actors are clad so they might be mistaken for stagehands who have wandered on Some are in white smocks, some in black smocks and some in dress suits and top hats. At the banquet (at which Timon pelts his guests with painted pebbles and declamatory invective) they wear Oriental prayer robes. There are some striking groupings, stage pictures reminiscent of the stylised Russian theater of Meyerhold and Talrov

The company, recruited from Brook's classes, is unprepared for any such lofty and sustained flight as this tragedy proposes. The program does not list who plays which part and so com must be made without naming names. The young man who plays Timon has presence and fervor. but requires additional training. Another member of the ensemble speaks with a disturbing Bela Lagosi accent and still another is in crying need of diction and projection lessons.

Brook encumbered with this troupe, has imposed upon himself's sort of theatrical obstacle: course, His directorial limbs are bound by amateur-or at best, semi-amateur interpreters. DARIS, Oct. 34 (IHT) .-- Although it will be another couple of years before Pierre Boules and the team of his new musical research institute can more into their subterranean cloister in the Centre Beaubourg cultural complax, he and his chief sides have ment the last few days introducing and explaining themselves to an interested and numerous

Four days of discussions and concerts have been divided socording to the subdivisions of IRCAM—the handy acronym for the weighty title of Institut de Recherone et de Coordination Accoustique Musique. In successive sessions, goals and problems have been defined and music presented by Luciano Bario (electro-acoustic), Vinko Globokar (instruments and voice), and Jean-Claude Risset (computer).

Last night it was the turn of Boules himself, with Gerald Bennett, the head of the institute's "diagonal," or coordinating, de-partment, to outline the overall aims. After which, the Théâtre d'Orsay was packed for two hourlong performances of Bouler's "Explosante-Fixe," its Paris pre-

That all this should be taking place in Jean-Louis Barrault's theater added a piquant note to the composer's "homecoming," for a quarter-century ago he was musical director for Barrault's troupe, and Barrault in turn was a kind of godfather to Bonlea's Domaine Musical, whose concerts offered last night would hardly find an opponent in the most conservative quarters or among the hardiest opponents of say, Bou-les's own music. One is the simosphere of uncertainty not to say a collective mental block, in which creativity in music finds

Speaking of the "necessity" for an organisation like IRCAM, Boulez argued that, in music, "things are at a point that solutions must be found," that the gap must be closed between the idees of composers and their means of expressing them, a gap that has often resulted in the abuse of traditional instruments and which is the reason for the close collaboration between musicians, scientists and technicians envisioned in IRCAM.

"After all," he said, "scientific people established the tempered scale. The 18th century produced 2 lot of musical theory, but it is the music itself that one listens to."

Another need that Boules saw being fulfilled in IRCAM was its independence. "Such an organiration cannot be attached to any existing organization," he said, citing universities and radio-tolevision networks as the kinds of organizations that have supported such research, but in a marginal, prestige-oriented way that pre-

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (IRT). This is how critics for The New York Times rate new stage

"The Wager," by Mark Medoff, is "a dandy new comedy" and "another play you can bet on in a great theater season," writes Clive Barnes, "Medoff, who gave us When You Comin' Back, Red Ryder? last season, is a daxterms and extraordinarily witty playwright." The play is about four California graduate students: "Leeds (Kristoffer Tabori), the philosophy major who uses logic like a rapier ... is a fine picture of the traumatized intellectual; Ward (Kenneth Gilman) is a sports freak who details his love life in a little black book; Ron (Jon Heard) is a bore, a microbiologist who used to go hunting with a submachine gun, and Honor (Linda Cook) is the girl he pores. All four performances are charming. The staging is exemplary, David Mitchell's setting, though rather opulent for graduate students, even California graduate students, is pleasant to look at, and Anthony Perkins has directed the piece with the lightest

"The National Health," by Peter POUTO DE OME DI THE best plays of the season," Clive Barnes writes. "It is a flawed work of pure genius, and should be seen by anyone with an interest in contemporary theater." In his new "brilliant if deathly comedy," Nichols ("One Day in the Death of Joe Egg") "finds cancer a subject for laughter. "The National Health' is almost a documentary about hospitals and hospitalization. Hardly, it would seem, a thome for humor. Yet Nichols makes it both compelling and quite fantastically furny." The play was first staged in the United States by Arvin Brown for his Long Wharf Theater in New Hayen. It was ori-ginally staged in London by the National Theatre. "The company is absolutely splendid. The one newcomer to the U.S. production, Leonard Frey, plays the central role with compulsive brilliance." "Brief Lives," Clive Barnes writes, is "absolutely enthrulling.

It is a one-character play about a rambling, 17th-century gossip, John Aubrey," who "sat close to the great and the friends of the great kept his eyes and cars open and had an enormous sest for trony... The adaptation of these Auther joitings—many com-ing from the author's posthumous and subsequently acclaimed Brief Lives—has been lovingly made by Patrick Garland, who also directed the play, with enormous skill. Nor can any words of praise be too great for Julia Trevelyan Oman who has assembled, littered and generally created the setting. But finally it all comes down to Roy Dotrice's brilliant impersonstion of Aubrey. Dotrice, benign, benevolent and also delightfully waspish, his vague manner seem-ing to shield a magpie mind and sharp ear, is a total delight."

"Figures in the Sand," by Nathan Teltel, "consists of two unrelated one-act plays," Mel Gus-sow writes, Each shares actors (Carol Teitel and Kevin O'Connor) and a director (Nick Havinga) and both are set near a beach. "The first, Trio, is a small, realistic (up to a point) study of a pathetic couple locked into a parren existence. Their dialogue is heavy with cliches, such as 'Live and let die' and Life is a one-way street, which possibly are meant to be humorous." The second play, "Duet," is much more ambitious and abstract, which takes its couple back in time and through several transformations of character, Gussow says. Though "Dust" is the more interesting of the two, it is not interesting enough. What does hold attention is the netcepted, Stalinist totalita. Barnes says. It is withou he writes, Brecht's most versial play. "Despite Barnes says, "this is a t physical dramatic leve survival . . . The new rates, decided at a meeting of the bank's directors in Frankfurt, will go into effect

In announcing the decision, spokersten for the bank said that the rates were being lowered to take into account "changed cir-cumstances" in the German economy. The specific intent, the spokesmen said, was to prevent a new rise in interest rates on German capital markets.

This move away from the tightmoney policies pursued for the past two years by both the govermment and the central bank indicated a possible shift in Bonn's economic priorities. Until now, the main emphasis has been on holding down inflation by keeping interest rates high enough discourage borrowing and iness expansion.

On Monday, however, the country's five leading economic re-search institutes predicted that the downswing triggered by the energy squeeze and other factors will cause the number of unemployed to rise to approximately one million this winter.

That would mean a virtual doubling of the present unemployment rate. In a country that has been accustomed to almost full employment for two decades, this figure is regarded as so high that it poses a potential political danger to Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's government.

Accordingly, today's action, which had the backing of both Bundesbank president Karl Klasen and Finance Minister Hans Apel was seen as a bid to make employment-creating expansion a bit easier for German business.

It was the first change in the discount rate since it was boosted from 6 to 7 per cent on June 1 last year. That capped a series of six consecutive boosts, all aimed at fighting inflation by re-stricting credit, that began in October 1972 when the discount rate was only 3 per cent,

The Lombard rate also was raised to 9 per cent on June 1, 1973. It subsequently was boosted another point to 10 per cent but then dropped back to 9 per cent on July 3 of this year.

The Bunder bank also raised u rediscount quotas for commercial banks by 2.5 billion deutsche marks as of Nov. 1. These quotas provide a means of raising credit from the central bank by using bills as collateral.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

BP Makes New Find in North Sea

British Petroleum has announced a new off field in the U.K. sector of the North Sea. It said an exploration well in North Sea block 15/28 has penetrated a "substantial thickness of oil-saturated sands." Oil was tested at a flow rate of 5,000 barrels a day. BP says the results indicate the existence of an oilfield, which has been named "Andrew." The size of the field, and its commercial significance can only be established by the drilling of further wells, it adds. The structure straddles block 15/28 and the adjoining block 16/27, which is held by a group headed by Philips Petrolsum Co.

Kennecott, Chile Set Compensation

Kennecott Copper has reached an agreement with Chile whereby the government will pay $54 million in compensation for the 1971 nationation of the company's Braden Copper Co. In its 1971 annual report, Kennecott set its 49-per-cent equity interest in Braden at $50.4 million. In 1967, Braden sold a 51-per-cent interest in the El Teniente Mining Co. to the government for $80 million, which has been paid. Under the new agreement, payment of the $54 million will be made in 19 semi-annual installments, beginning in April, 1975. El Teniente, the world's larges underground mine, was one of five U.S.-operated copper mines nationalized by the government of the late President Salvedor Allende, which, citing their "excessive" profits, refused to pay any compensation for four of the mines.

W. German Auto Firms Face Cuts

The West Germany car industry will have to cut production further in coming months due to the decline in domestic and foreign orders. The motor industry association says that total vehicle production rose 43.1 per cent to 256,505 units in September compared with August, but was 24.9 per cent below the September, 1973, level. Car production fell 26.1 per cent and truck production 15.4 per cent on an annual basis, while bus and tractor production rose. Exports were higher in September than August but were 41 per cent down compared with September, 1973, at 121,670 units. Exports in the first nine months were down 16.7 per cent,

U.S. Auto Sales Off 28%

U.S. auto makers suffered their second consecutive setback of the new model year in mid-October as car sales declined 28 per cent from year-ago levels. For the first 10 days of the month, when all but American Motors' 1975 models were in dealer showrooms, sales declined 15 per cent from 1973. Analysts attribute the latest sharp decline to consumer resistance to price increases. The companies raised prices on their models this fall by an average $400 to $450. Sales for AMC were down 46 per cent for the period, General Motors sales declined 34 per cent, Chrysler was off 18.5 per cent and Ford was down 18 per cent. For the year to date, industry sales are down 21 per cent.

Canon Expects 49% Drop in Profits Canon, the Japanese electronics firm, expects second-half profits to drop 49 per cent to 500 million yen (about $1.7 million), compared with 982 million yen in the first half. The company's spokesman, Hiromu Nishigaki, says sales are likely to rise 7.2 per cent to 38 billion yen. The most important factor in the decline is a drop of about 1 billion yen in profits from the sales of desk-top electronic calculators. Mr. Nishigaki says he cannot say whether Canon will cut its dividend rate for the six months from the three

TOKYO, Oct. 24 (AP-DJ).—The like many foreign concerns, Japan or aituation in Japan is worse anese companies "reduce their labor situation in Japan is worse than most union leaders and union members realize, Ichiro Shioji, a top labor leader, said today in an interview. Mr. Shioji, president of the confederation of Japan automobile workers' unions and vice-president of Domei, the nation's second-largest labor federation, described the deteriorating job market as "much worse" than similar periods of weakness that occurred in 1965 and 1957-59. The reason, he explained, is that Japan's economy was still fundamentally on a high growth path during the previous downturns, In contrast, the present situation is characterized by a low-growth outlook and by unprecedented inflation, a combinaperienced in the postwar period. The available unemployment statistics greatly underestimate the extent of the current problem, Mr. Shioji said. Although less than 2 per cent of the na-tion's 53-million-person labor force is officially out of work (and most of them are seasonal workers or hard-core unemployables), many companies are carrying large numbers of unneeded

The early retirement offer gives them a legitimate excuse to make a change they may have desired for some time, but failed workers on their payrolls. These workers could suddenly find to make because of the social and themselves out of a job if the financial problems involved in job-switching in Japan, Mr. Shioil recession deepens. concept that binds the labormanagement relationship in Japan," Mr. Shioji said. The top priority of the union movement, which is organized on a companyby-company rather than a trades basis, is to keep people employed with their present firms, the union leader said. Fallure to obtain continuous employment for their members is a very transmatic experience for union leaders. This week, the leader of Yashica's labor union stabbed himself in an alleged suicida attempt while hospitalized for exhaustion following prolong-ed, unsuccessful negotiations with the company over a proposed work-force reduction.

Yashica, facing severe business problems, sold one of its factories and dismissed about 900 of its 2 300 employees despite a union attempt to prevent the move.

The incident illustrates the social tensions that could arise should the labor market continue

Asked whether he thought the government should concentrate on fighting the recession to generate jobs rather than on battling inflation, Mr. Shioji said: "In my view, inflation is a more serious problem." Bank Sees U.S. Tax Plan

Rejects View of Some That Project Is Timid

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (AP-DJ). -Morgan Guaranty Trust says President Ford's proposed liberalization of the 7-per-cent invest-ment tax credit to 10 per cent undoubtedly will have an impact greater than the increase would seem to portend. In its October issue of the

Morgan Guaranty Survey, the bank notes that the new 10-per-cent credit could be carried forward three years by firms lacking enough earnings to use the full credit, and that the Treasury. at the end of the three years, would make a cash refund of the unused part .. the credit. "At present, credits which cannot be used in the carry-forward period simply expire. The increase in the after-tax rate of return that these liberalizations imply is significant," it says.

The bank also says that critics who have termed Mr. Ford's plan timid have ignored the fact that it "is strikingly different from the fiscal stance government has followed at similar stages of previous business cycles." "By not moving to a more stimulative fiscal posture at a time when the unempolyment rate is pushing 8 per cent—and headed higher—the President has clearly indicated that .atrolling inflation is paramount," it com-

Dunlop Pirelli Profit Up 25%

LONDON, Oct. 24 (AP-DJ).— The Dunlop Pirelli Union's net profit rose 23.5 per cent in the first helf to total £8.47 million, up from £6.86 million in the same period a year earlier.

Reporting this today, Dunlop in the group, said turnover rose to £762 million from £600 million. Net profit at Dunlop Holdings alone rose to £5.51 million in the first half from £5.39 million, The company set an interim dividend of 1,675 pence, equivalent to 2.5

pence gross, unchanged, The Dunlop Pirelli Union comprises companies in which Dunlop and Italy's Pirelli group have a joint interest.

Dunlop Holdings said it is difficult to predict profit for the full year but the results of Industrie Pirelli are likely to be worse in the second half of this year than for January to June. This would adversely affect the Dunlop-Pirelli Union profits, but not those of Dunlop Holdings, the company said.

Paribas Profit Falls

PARIS, Oct. 24 (Reuters).—Cie Financière de Paris et des Pays Bes (Paribas) said today its firsthalf 1974 gross operating profit fell to 65.4 million francs ($14 million) from 70.9 million francs a year earlier.

But in an interview with La Vie Française, Paribas chairman Jacques de Fouchier said the company's 1974 dividend is well assured, as is the supplementary payment on its 1973 dividend. In 1873 Paribas paid 14.18 francs and said it would pay an additional 82 centimes for 1973 with the 1974 dividend.

Paribas's portfolio revenues are sharply higher this year, be said.

commemorate the establishment of the Banque Nationale de Paris (Ireland) Ltd.—the new Irish subsidiary of the BNP—numerous personalities of the business world attended an official reception at Dublin's Trinity College on Friday evening, Oct. 11, 1974. The guests were per-sonally greeted by Mr. Pierre LEDOUX, President of the Banque Nationale de Paris, and Mr. Edouard FINOT, Director of the Banque Nationale de Paris and Chairman of BNP (Ireland) Ltd. The reception was also honored by the presence of Dr. Garret FITZGERALD, Foreign Secretary of the Irish Republic.

In an allocution at the reception, Dr. FITZGERALD stressed the ties of long duration existing between Ireland and France. He went on to state that, because of the creation of the Banque Nationale de Paris (Ireland) Ltd_ the BNP Group would now be in a position not only to enhance the business relationship between the two countries, but will also bring its own contribution to the increasing volume of trade between Ireland and the numerous countries where the Group is implanted (more than sixty). Ireland, in fact, attaches a great deal of importance to the diversification of its external trading accounts. This policy was given a new thrust by Ireland's adhesion to the European Economic Community on January 1st, 1973.

In his response to Dr. FITZGERALD, Mr. LEDOUX dwelled on the performance of the Irish economy during the last ten years and also referred with pride to the recent award of the NOBEL PEACE PRIZE to Mr. Sean McBRIDE, who. himself, had made a personal and important contribution to European cooperation.

N.Y. Broker Reports Loss Due to Fraud

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (NYT) .-Loeb, Ehoades & Co., the big New York investment banking and brokerage house, has disclosed that it lost an estimated $3.25 million as a result of what it termed "fraudulently placed" sugar futures contracts.

The company said in a brief "In recent days, a registered representative in our commodities department fraudulently placed a sizable number of sugar con-tracts. The resulting positions have now been closed out. The loss, which we estimate at $3.25 million, is covered by insurance. The matter is now in the hands of the district attorney and the United States attorney." Carl Mueller, managing partner of the prestigious Wall Street firm, said the situation developed about a week ago and that the employee was on the short side of the futures market. At the time, prices were mov-

U.S. Oil Firms Reporting Huge Gain in Profit

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (UPI) -Three more American oil companies today reported substantial increases in earnings but they defended unprecedented increases in their profits as necessary to finance oil and gas exploration.

Texaco said its profits were up 70 per cent for the first nine months of the year and 23 per cent for the third quar ter. Marathon's profits were up 78 per cent for the nine months and 50 per cent for the quarter, and Skelley's were up 186 per cent for the nine months and 380 per cent for the last three months.

Other major oil companies bave reported similar skyrocketing profits.

Jacquemaire Blédina

BSN-Gervais Danone emphasised its multinational aspects with a turnover of 54% in France and 46% abroad (including 34% in EEC countries). This multinationalism is particularly pronounced in the glass sector since BSN-Gervais Danone is one of the leading European glass manufacturing groups:

> 85% of flat glass production is carried out mainly in Germany and Belgium.

> BSN-Gervais Danone is the leading producer of glass containers in France (making more than 50% of all bottles) and in Holland.

CONSOLIDATED TURNOVER PER COUNTRY

The Group employs a staff of 73,000, almost half being outside France.

Results in 1973 showed an important increase: The Group's consolidated net profit, excluding minority interests and exceptional capital gains amounted to Frs. 233 million, or Frs. 101.5 per share, an increase of 32% over 1972, taken on a comparative basis.

As regards 1974, the Chairman of the Group recently said that, although all sectors would show a profit for this year, it was not possible, due to present economic conditions, to avoid a decline in results per share which could go back approximately to the 1972 level.

Provisional Consolidated Turnover figures for the three branches for the first half-year 1974 were:

Flat glass	+ 7.2%
Food	+18.9%
Containers	+29.2%

products (food and glass containers).

PORTO SPAIN

INVESTORS PRINCIPALS

We are a large SWISS-BELGIAN group developing in SWITZERLAND, FRANCE and SPAIN.

We are now embarking upon an extremely large marina project between Murcia and Almeria of 15,000 units consisting of land and water-based plots plus apartments. This project is EXTREMELY SOPHISTICATED but designed to attract the Middle, as well as the South of France, Marbella and U.S. markets.

EXTENSIVE marketing and sales will commence via our already existing sales forces in BENELUX, ENGLAND, FRANCE, SWITZERLAND and GERMANY in May 1975. We point out at this stage that we are highly experienced in this field and are inviting investors with a minimum of $50,000 to participate in a land-secured investment which is the largest of its kind in Spain.

In the first instance, contact: S. Le Carpentier, BECISA/URBACOS S.A. 327 Avenue Louise, Brussels, Belgium.

WILLEM DE KOONING

Text by Harold Rosenberg, plus an interview and two statements by the artist. Abrams. [llustrated. $40.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

66 FLESH was the reason why T oil painting was invented, says Willem de Kooning. "Forms ought to have the emotion of a concrete experience. As I pored over this rambunctiously beautiful book about him and his work it seemed to me that he supports his statements very convincingly. He paints, says Harold Rosen-berg, in the text of "Willem de Kooning," by "getting into the canvas and working his way out again," by making "a formally coherent entity out of synthesized associations" or "slipping ed associations" or "slipping glimpses," as the artist himself calls them. Illustrating Rosenberg's concept of "action painting," De Kooning arrives at his forms not on the basis of a preconceived style or theory, but in the act of expressing his feelings about each individual subject.

While "Attic," "Excavation" and "Montauk" are among his most effective works, I think it is safe to say that women are De Kooning's obsessive subject, one that he says "could never be exhausted." In some quarters, his painting of women have oc-casioned terms like "matricide," and "masochist" and I confess that when I first saw them. I felt that they were ambivalent, at the very least His portraits struck me as extremely violent, if not actually hostile. "Woman," painted in 1949, has feral teeth and a glowering eye. Her hand on her hip looks defiant, and above her head there is a nimbus of aggressive scrawls and splotch-

"Woman I," painted between 1950 and 1952 also has ferociously bared teeth and menacing hyperthyroid eyes. The conformation of her breasts suggests handcuffs or twin hangman's nooses, and her body is an explosion of furious energy. She faces the viewer squarely in an unmitigated confrontation, crowding the picture space with her massive presence. She is felt not so much as a shape but a force, and one naturally wonders: What sort of force? De Kooning's phrase, "the melodrama of vul-garity," is too narrow for her: She seems closer to his desire to go "as far as one can go."
If women have often been idealized in painting, perhaps this is as far as one can go in tearing away the veil

I found, though, that as I progressed through "Willem de Kooning." the women softened and I began to see them more clearly, too: Like all acts of drastic originality, these portraits take some getting used to The artist himself has called them vociferous, ferocious, idols and oracles—but he has also used the word hilarious and suggested that they sometimes wear the "astonished smile" of Mesopotamian art, an expression evoked by "the forces of nature." You might say then that he is reacting to their reaction to the prodigality of nature—their own and that of the world around them. I like to think that De Kooning was just as startled as I was in the beginning, by what he had created, that he had not known, until he revealed it on his own canvas, just how formidable women are. However, once he had liberated their genius from his paint cans, once he was past the trauma of their birth, ir, which he mothered them—ther he was able to soften, or at leas sweeten his images. He give-one woman a bicycle, to show that she is playful. Another glares with only one eye, while its mate gazes thoughtfully in the distance. BRIDGE

By Alan Trusc

Unifice chess, bridge is not a game in which justice prevails. Rather it is a difficult game of chance. Right actions turn out to be wrong in the circumstances.

There were plenty of both on the diagramed deal.

The players were using strong two-bids, so South naturally opened two dismonds.

The next three bids were obvious enough: negative response of two no-trump, a rebid of diamonds, and the introduction of North's long heart suit. Now it was entirely reasonable for South to think that the, chances of nine tricks in no-trump were better than the chances of 11 tricks in diamonds. But as it happened three notrump would have had virtually no chance, while five diamonds was a plausible long-shot. So the bid of three no-trump was South's second right action in the wrong circumstances.

North should no doubt have passed three no-trump, since South was likely to be short in hearts, and might easily have nine running tricks in no-trump. However, the dublous decision to bid four hearts succeeded in a sense. South could not stand four hearts, and tried five diamonds, reaching a contract with some

The bidding thus marked South with considerable diamond length and short hearts, probably a void. A black suit lead away from a queen was therefore highly

So the spade finesse was taken. West won and returned a club When South won and cashed the diamond ace, he planned to continue with a low diamond. But the fall of the diamond ten gave him a final crucial decision. Had West started with a doubleton king-ten or a doubleton jack-Williams's departure was not a surprise. He falled to adjust to a switch to first base last season and his return to left field kept hard-hitting Jerry Morales out of the lineup. Also, Williams missed the last month of the season with a leg injury.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24. (NYT).— The New York Mets, who left yesterday for a tour of Japan; have made a deal designed to bolster their outfield. They acquired the respected Gene Clines of the Pittsburgh Pirates for Duffy Dyer, their second-string catcher, whose hobby is flower-arranging.

Clines has often complained of his second-string status. But he has had some top seasons, including a 308 batting average in 97 games in 1971 and 334 in 107 games the next year. Now 28, he hit 225 this year, mostly as a pinch-hitter.

Dyer has posted a career batting mark of only 211. But he holds a club record. His eight home runs in 1972 were the most struck by a Met catcher in any

Two months ago, the Moscow Preparatory Committee for the 1980 Olympic Games received a letter from a man in Siberia requesting tickets for the boxing finals: Two days ago, a Russian official at the International Olympic Committee's meeting in Vienna said, "If we get the games, this man will surely get his tickets."

Yesterday Moscow got the games and all the foresightedness is beginning to pay off. Few, if any, members of the IOC doubt that everything will be ready for 1980. With six years to go, work has already started on the Olympic village for the athletes. Moscow also has been planning ahead for the invasion of Olympic tourists. Scrambled eggs for the Americans and croissants for the French and enough hotel space for everyone are promised. Moscow officists, who plan to make their territory the "ideal Communist city" by 1980, started to work on improving tourist accommodations about a year go. There has often been a shortage of hotel rooms in Moscow, and those available were usually in the luxury-class price range, but with

Bonds Is Happy to Leave Rumors Behind

By Murray Chass

NEW YORK, Oct. 34 (NYT), He was so thrilled with the trade he flew all night from San Francisco to talk about it. He wasn't thrilled about the drug rumors that have plagued him this year, but he talked about

Bobby Bonds, who figures to be the most exciting New York Yankee since Mickey Mautie, also talked yesterday about some other problems—a brief flare-up with his manager this season and his drunk-driving arrest last season—and he told how his wife was happy with the trade but that the oldest of their three. sons, 10-year-old Barry, "has a girl friend that I don't think he wants to leave."

Players seldom discuss their off-field lives, especially the less glamorous aspects, but the drug stories have persisted all season, and Bonds, 28, was eager to confront the problem publicly for the first time and eliminate it for all time.

"I will not let the doctor give me any type of medicine with a drug in it," Bonds said, sitting behind a desk at the Yankee offices 90 minutes after arriving from San Francisco. "I have never smoked a marijuana joint. I have never taken a pill. When first heard it (the rumor), it kind of shocked me because I never have taken any type of

"You can ask the Giants' team physician. He'd give me a tablet, when I was sick or something and I would ask him did it have any drugs in it because I wouldn't take it if it did. I've always been like that. Charlie (Fox, then the giant manager) asked me in spring if I was messing with drugs and it shocked me. I said are you kidding? I never in my messed with any kind of drugs."

Bonds said he had no idea how the stories got started but that he never had bothered to rebut them because "I knew it wasn't true. I knew I never had done it in my life, so there was nothing to get upset about."

Bonds also has a reputation as a drinker, a reputation that was given impetus by a drunk-driving arrest and an ensuing $360 fine

Dodgers' Alston No. 1 in League

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (NYT)-Walter Alston of the Los Angeles Dodgers was named the National League Manager of the Year yesterday by the Associated Press and United Press International. Alston, who piloted the Dodgers to the pennant for the seventh time in his 21 seasons, did better in the voting than his team did against the Oakland A's in the recent World Series. Alston outscored Danny Murtaugh of Pittsburgh, 290 to 87, in the AP poll. He beat Danny Ozark of Philadelphia, 11-3, in the UPI

Alston, 62, signed his first oneyear contract in Brooklyn in 1954. "One-year contracts are a matter of pride with me," said Alston. "I wouldn't want to work anywhere I wasn't wanted."

Regarding his ability to make the most of his players, Alston, known as the "quiet man," said,
"I pat most everybody on the back and kick the rare ones that need to be kicked."

Yanks Rehire Virdon

NEW YORK, Oct. 24 (UPI) .-Bill Virdon, in trouble twice last season when the New York Yankees floundered during their American League pennant bid. was rehired today and given a two-year contract. Virdon, 43, was a second choice as manager in 1974 when the Yankees failed to land Dick Williams. He signestimated $50,000, inherited a fourth-place club in the American League East and elevated them to second in 1974.

He had gone to his brother's house after a doubleheader for a picnic, Bonds explained. They played dominoes-"I love dominoes"-and they drank beer-"too many beers."

"I should have stayed over-night," he explained "but I tried to drive home, and I have an accident a mile from my house. It was embarrassing."

Bonds said he faced additional problems this past season, including the confrontation with Fox, and "really I wasn't thinking right." But, he added emphatically, "the problems are gone. They are way behind me."

In other words, while Tony Francisco, Bonds left his problems there. Bonds learned about his trade for Bobby Murcer while he was fishing with Jim Ray Hart, a former Giant and former Yan-When he arrived at his home in San Carlos, about 35 miles south of San Francisco, Bobby said he was whistling and singing but his wife, Pat, was very quiet.

"What's wrong?" he asked. "I didn't know how you felt about it," Pat replied.

"I'm happy," Bobby said.
"Then she said she was really happy about it," Bonds added, "and she started whistling and

Foreman Also Fighting Confusion

By John Vinocur

KINSHASA, Zaire, Oct. 24 (AP).—George Foreman sits with both knees pumping and his hand swats at flies that aren't there.

It is not nervousness, but rather a kind of restlessness that no victory over Muhammad Ali on Oct. 30 will take away. The restlessness comes from the realization that the heavyweight championship, money, and life are not turning out as he expected and that, strangely, the an-novance and the routine of training for a fight are things he can handle best and likes best.

He is 25 and when he is relaxed he has a smiling face that wouldn't frighten anybody and a way of making points in con-versation by sliding close to what he means to say without banging it on the head. It is sort of a sense for nuances.

George is sitting under thatched terrace at his hotel with his cousin and a reporter. The autograph hunters are in the swimming pool and the Zaire security men are off eating their hunch or polishing their cars. It's not a bad time.

"You know," Foreman says,
"I'm just thinking about what

I'm going to do after. "Down here I've got four sparring partners and my guys to talk to and the reporters interested whether you're going to have a press conference or not. You go to sleep and there's always something to do the next day. But when the fight's over,

"I don't have anything to do I just sit around. I might take a drive at three o'clock in the morning, it's like that. Back home, I like to have people out to visit, but it's a bit of a trip back to town and they've all got to go to work in the morning. I'm the guy that doesn't."
Foreman had no way of knowing that it would be that way, a title and money that would leave him feeling cut off and maybe a little confused. The world outside Houston's Fifth Ward turned out to be not so

His money has let him indulge his interest in dogs, but he found himself drowning in his own indulgence.

"You know I had kennels built, but the thing was they got built too fast. I thought I was going to have those guys around for three or four weeks and I looked forward to it. But when you've got money it doesn't happen like that. They came over and they were built in a week. It was too fast, and all of a sudden there I was again. I had kennels, alright, but it wasn't me that built

Learning Process A lot of the things that the championship has allowed Foreman to do have turned out to by Nate William with six seconds be disappointments, but the dis- left lifted the Kansas City-Omaha Zephyrs in 1961.

"I just know now that I'm not a night person. It's yes or no and I'm not. Maybe sometimes I'll go out thinking, okay, the other people want to and it will be some laughs and then when I get there I think 'Oh, dog,' what "It was the same with doing TV shows. I thought that would turn me on, going out to the studio. I thought it would be glamorous with a lot of people around. You know, good. But

Ali Is Jumping With Enthusiasm

N'SELE, Zaire, Oct. 24 (AP).-Muhammad Ali raised some blood pressures today when he jumped from an eight-foot-high ring, lost his balance and fell to his

"I thought, it's going to be Christmas in Zaire," said Gene Kilroy, Ali's business manager, thinking of another postpone-ment of Ali's fight with heavyweight champion George Fore-man on Oct. 30.

The fight originally was set for Sept. 25 but had to be postponed when Foreman cut his right eye during a sparring session Sept. 16. "It was nothing, he's not hurt," said Angelo Dundee, Ali's appointments have helped him all those people are working They get a lunch break and they just eat. It's not a lot of fooling around." The answer about what to do with himself apart from boxing —which he deeply enjoys—is not clear yet. That is what makes the knees pump and the big hands shoot out at the files that aren't there. The thought that keeps coming back to Foreman is the idea that maybe he could combine fighting with going to school. His brother is in college in California and when he talks about him Foreman sounds proud and almost a bit envious. "He's always telling me he's got to go to the library. I'm crazy about reading," Foreman says. "I just scoop it up. If I could get the credits and could start school it would be a dream for me."

The money, the $5 million that Foreman will get next week, seems to inspire much less excitement. Accountants are figuring out what his share will be and "they've done it five or six times already and they don't really know yet."

Foremen's face is blank when he talks about the millions. Either he is monumentally insincere or he really just doesn't care that

You talk about dreams," he said. "There are a lot of people building their dreams on my five

Observer The Memory Gap

By Russell Baker

WASHINGTON.—It is extraordinary how many things we don't talk about any more. There is Watergate, which everybody is tired of hearing about, and there is Vietnam, which everybody wants to pretend doesn't exist.

And Patricia Hearst. If anyone ever mentions Patricia Hearst these days it is only to ask as one might ask about the good old days, "whatever happened to Patricia Hearst?" Whatever happened to the Symbionese Liberation

Army? For that Baker matter, whatever happened to black power, the New Left and "the movement"? What was "the movement" anyhow? Nobody ever talks about "the revolution" any more, nor campus unrest, nor the Beatles. When is the last time anybody talked about "hippies"? about

"fun city"?

Nobody says "uptight" any more or "backlash" or "silent majority." Nobody talks about "the free world," "the struggle for men's minds," "the new politics" or Spire Agnew. It is as though Agnew had bever existed, yet within the menory of recently born babes he was the rising glory of Republi-canism. Now, in less than a year, he has become an unperson. So has John Connally. Anybody remember "Big John"? He was the post-Agnew rising glory of Republicanism and now he has been consumed and forgotten after three minutes of fame. Three minutes of fame may be all any man, any idea or any event can expect nowadays. There was a war in Cyprus a few weeks ago and afterward a sort of revolution in Greece, and who remembers it any more?

Refugee's Citizenship Withdrawn by Prague

PRAGUE, Oct. 24 (Reuters),-The Ministry of the Interior has withdrawn Czechoslovak citizenship from Jiri Hochman, a prominent liberal journalist in the "Prague spring" liberalizatiou period under Alexander Dubcek.

The reason, given in a brief statement, was that Mr. Hochman "consistently defamed the Socialist society and state system of Czechoslovakia in the foreign press and alanderous foreign radio stations." Mr. Hochman was given permission to leave Czechoslovakia in the summer and is now believed to be in the United States,

Anything that is four minutes old is as ancient as Egypt. And speaking of Egypt, whatever happened to Libya?

We consume our history so fast to get on to the next tidhit that there is no time to digest it, and so become a people without

Whatever happened to George McGovern? Who was Filiot Rich-

To ask these questions is to be tiresome, to betray oneself as a lingerer in the past at a time when events are rushing ahead at breakneck speed. We like that cliche-events rushing at breakneck speed-i gives us the sense of living dynamically, which is a delusion because events are not rushing anywhere. We are merely consuming them at indigestible speed, perhaps so they will not get lodged in our memory and to mean something to us.

Who was General Thieu? What was My Lai? Does anybody remember light at the end of the binnel?

Nobody wants to hear about such things any more. We are blanking experience out of memory. There are weighty events bearing down upon us which must be dealt with at once. President Ford's swimming pool. Pollutionemission controls. The cold-water laundry crisis.

Who has heard lately of Elizabeth Taylor? What became of Rowan and Martin? Stokely Car-Abby Hoffman and michael? Jerry Rubino

It is not surprising that trivia is one of the few pastimes that has survived an entire decade, for it demands ability to remember facts without context, and facts without context are almost all that remain when you consume history with your brain off. Nowadays, context is harder to find than 90-cent hamburger.

It is very much like flying across the country by jet. The country does not rush by underneath so rapidly that we cannot s it, sense it, digest it and emerge with the slightest sense of what an extraordinary and fascinating place it is: it is we who rush by overhead so fast that the journey becomes meaningless.

"We are coming up over the Grand Canyon on the left side of the plane now and will shortly be crossing the Mississippi River, folks." What was Pompidou? Which was Anthony Ulasewicz? Why was Charles Manson? Who was the second man on the moon?

It is a fast trip up here at 35,000 light years above context, but despite the speed you sometimes wonder if you are really going any place at all.

Seriousness Of Americans Who Study Abroad Now

By Betty Werther

STRASBOURG, France (IHT). -The difference between Americans studying abroad today and those who came in 1970 is like night and day," said Richard Hogrefe, director of the new Strasbourg campus of Schiller College-Europe University, which offers an international study program that is already gearing itself to meet the difference.

'Four years ago," he said, "they all seemed to be revolu-tionaries. They arrived in droves (in 1969-70 the number of U.S. students studying abroad was 32,148, the highest ever recorded, marking an increase of 28 per cent over the previous year). Most, however, acted as though they were out for a lark, just here to have a good time. In those days, I would say 90 per cent were on drugs. Today, that problem is almost negligible."

Some of the more ambitious students were still trying to attend one of the great European universities. Most of and particularly the undergraduates, however, found different systems too bewildering, the language barrier too great and the transfer of credits too complicated. Many took advantage of one of the hundreds of academic programs abroad which had mushroomed in Europe as their necessity became apparent.

Schiller College, one of these programs, was founded in 1964 by its current president, Walter Leibrecht, who earned his doctorate at the University of Heidelberg, then taught at Columbia, the University Chicago and Harvard. That first year, 30 students enrolled to study at the college, set up in a small castle near Heidelberg.

Over the next 10 years, Schiller, in addition to its academic year abroad, became one of the first overseas institutions to offer complete bachelor's and master's programs, partly intended for the children of the over 2 million Americans who live outside the United States. Schiller's main originality lay in setting up study centers in cities throughout Europe. This means that the 650 students, most from the United States-there are 30 other countries represented in the student body—can break up their academic year abroad, spending each semester at a different center. Or, if they are working directly for a degree from Schiller itself, spend a year at two or more of these five centers: in Heldelberg, London, Paris, Madrid and, as of this month. Strasbourg. "Students now are quieter more serious, and, above all, terribly job conscious," says Hogrefe. "When they see something really professional going on they jump at it." Schiller, except for freshman and sophomore years, plans to drop a general curriculum type program in favor of specializa The new campus at Strasbourg, seat of the Council of and the European Parliament, is particularly suited to students of international affairs and international business. But because of the rich French-German cultural life of the Alsatian capital, the Strasbourg center will gradually become even more specialized in the fine arts, music and theater. One psychology student there has already criticized Schiller's theater department, under the direction of U.S. playwright Charles Copenhaver, for being sional."

"We don't want to eliminate nonmajors," said George Lannan, director of the department's Theater Workshop Repertory Program, "but we make it clear from the start that we are not putting ou amateur productions. Everything is on a strictly profes-sional level." Last year, before coming to Strasbourg, for instance, the Schiller workshop's production of Samuel Beck tt's "Happy Days" was performed in conjunction with the International Beckett Colloquium during the annual Berlin Theater Festwochen. In Strasbourg, classes held and the majority of shidents housed in the 18th-century Château de Pourtales, a. mile from the city. During the 19th and 20th centuries. the u was the center of Alastian diplomatic and cultural

At the Paris study center, reserved for juniors, seniors and graduates, students live with French families and attend classes in an 18th-century townhouse near Napoléon's tomb.

In line with new student demands and employment possibilities, the center is now almost entirely oriented to what director Daniel Boyer describes as "International business in terms of international affairs, in terms of international relations." "I mean," he said, "and international business firms know, that if you don't understand politics these days, you won't understand econom

Referring again to what-observers in the United States call the "relevancy crisis" among students, Boyer said: "Their anxiety over the future, their constant need to know how they can benefit directly in concrete terms, makes things difficult for us at times. We try to explain that attitudes of tolerance and understanding can always be transferred to other situations and they accept this. But in terms of nure learning they want something highly functional."

Nonetheless, the cultural and travel study programs also play a key role on all Schiller campuses where, besides regular excursions to surrounding areas, each center offers the choice of two longer study trips each semester. This semester, students at Strasbourg will choose between a study tour to Prague and another to Venice. From London they can go either to Amster-dam or Edinburgh, and during the spring to Paris or Scandinavis. From Madrid, they can go to London or Lisbon, Heidelberg to Process idelberg to Prague or Paris, and from Paris to London or

Although the rate of increase in the number of U.S. students abroad has slowed considerably in 1971-72 the rate had dropped to 6 per cent compared to a 28-per-cent increase in 1969on enrollment.

For so many academic fields," said Boyer, "European exposure has become an indispensable requisite for professional status. I can safely say, for instance, that all of our graduates in international business easily find jobs since they are given high priority over those who have not studied abroad."

In addition, the costs study here $3,950 for full tuition, room and board for the Strasbourg academic yearabout the same or inferior to those in a private institution in the United States. "However," Boyer repeats

"the type of student, even in economic background, is very different. Several years ago most of them seemed to be from the upper middle class, with many parents shipping their revolutionaries over here to get them out of the country. Today they are decidedly middle class. Many have worked and saved to pay for the trip. Others have come under government, guaranteed loans. Instead of papa, footing the bill, they're paying their own way, so, more than ever before, they want to be sure of getting their money's

Somewhere there's an auto thief who must be kicking himself. He stole a car in July and for two months drove it around before abandoning it in late September. Had he looked in the trunk he would have found $250,000 in negotiable securities and lewelry. Police found the car in Seaside Heights, N.J., on Sept. 23—but didn't get around to looking in the trunk until Wednesday when the had finally located the owner of the car, David Sheldo 75, of New York City. Sheldon and his wife had been packing their car for a trip to Florida. They put the valuables in the trunk and went back to their apartment for other items. "When they returned to the street, the car was gone," said police Sgt. Gerald Lastella. The Sheldons reported the theft of the car but not the loss of the stocks, bonds and jewels.
